

ABSTRACT

A system and method for managing a portal adaptation lifecycle is disclosed that may include determining a construction design for an adapted portal application, determining a model for separation or presentation logic and application logic of an existing Web application to be adapted into the portal application, determining a navigation construction for the adapted portal application, selecting a level of customization to apply to the adapted portal application, and selecting an isolation model for isolating business logic from the adapted portal application.